Biographical/Historical note

Stimpson Harvey (S.H.) Woodward, a native of Massachusetts, moved from Pittsburgh to Wheeling, West Virginia in 1852. With twenty associates, he founded Bailey, Woodward and Company, and served as president. Over the next several years, he bought out his partners, becoming sole owner of the company. In addition he founded LaBelle Iron Works at Wheeling, West Virginia. In 1869, he visited Alabama, investigating reports by Union veterans of rich coal and iron deposits. Within a month he had purchased 550 acres of land on Red Mountain. Later that same year, he purchased 2000 acres more near Woodstock, Alabama. These properties were to become the nucleus of the Woodward Iron Company. In 1836, he married Margaret Glass, with whom he had four sons and four daughters. In the 1870s, two of these sons, Joseph H. Woodward (J.H.) and William H. Woodward (W.H.), investigated the possibility of using the coking process at the Alabama lands. Agreeing the process would be possible, the two sons founded the Woodward Iron Company following their father's death in 1881. W. H. served as president, while J.H. served as secretary-treasurer. Construction was begun almost immediately on the site's first blast furnace, 12 miles southeast of Birmingham, and was completed in 1883. The site was ideal. Placed between coal and iron mines, the plant was able to produce pig iron more cheaply and efficiently than competitors because of this close proximity to raw materials. In 1886, J.H. Woodward became the president of Woodward Iron Company. J.H. Woodward (1843-1917) had served in the Civil War for three years before moving to Texas to try his hand at ranching. The venture did not prove lucrative, and J.H. returned to West Virginia to work at LaBelle Iron Works. He served as president of Woodward Iron Company from 1886 until his retirement in 1910. During this tenure, the company built two more furnaces and became recognized for its quality pig iron. J. H. Woodward also served as president of the First National Bank of Birmingham and of LaBelle Iron Works. In 1869, he married Martha ("Mattie") B. Metcalf with whom he had three children. Upon his retirement in 1910, he handed the reins of the organization over to his only son, Allan H. Woodward. J.H. and Martha moved to Florida for a brief time, but ill health kept him in and out of hospitals until his death on December 15, 1917, the day before his birthday. After attending school at the University of the South at Sewanee, Tennessee and at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, A.H. Woodward (1876-1950) moved back home to Woodward, Alabama where he began working for the family company. Beginning as general superintendent in 1899, he became vice president by 1905 and president in 1910. By 1917, he became chairman of the Board of Directors of Woodward Iron Company. A.H., or "Rick," also held directorships at Wheeling Steel Corporation, First National Bank of Birmingham, Seaboard Air Line Railroad, the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic Railroad and the Children's Hospital of Birmingham. He also served as vice president of the Industrial Savings Bank. A.H. developed an interest in baseball while at college, and in 1909 he bought the Birmingham Barons. Rickwood Field, home of the Barons, is named for him. He also served as Vice-President of the Southern Association of Baseball Clubs. A.H.'s interest in railroads led him to retain an active license as an engineer with the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic Railroad well into his later years. Rick, an Episcopalian like his father and grandfather, also had an avid interest in hunting. In 1904, he married Annie Jemison, daughter of Robert Jemison, Jr., the great Birmingham developer. They had five children. Their first boy was J.H. Woodward II (1912-1965). J.H. II attended school at Phillips Academy and Yale and later served in World War II. During the war, he married Mary Massebeau and afterwards returned to work at Woodward Iron Company, serving as the company's forestry engineer. He also authored Alabama Blast Furnaces (1940), which traced the history of iron production in Alabama, and several works of fiction. J.H. II worked as attorney in fact for his father until A.H.'s death in November 1950. He then served on Woodward Iron Company's Board of Directors, as well as the board of directors of First National Bank of Birmingham, Allied Life Insurance (Birmingham), and the Jefferson County Community Chest. J.H. II and his wife Mary had two children (Mary C. and Anne J.). He died in June 1965.

Scope and Contents note

The papers span four generations and have been divided into four subgroups, each with a similar arrangement: diaries (if available), correspondence, business, legal and financial papers and miscellany. A fifth subgroup, photographs, spans generations and is thus self-contained. Subgroup S. H. Woodward includes five series: Diaries, Personal Correspondence, Business Correspondence, Business and Legal Papers and Miscellaneous. The four series cover both private and public interests of S.H. Woodward. Subgroup J.H. Woodward reflects multiple personal and business interests. There are six series within this subgroup: Diaries, Personal Correspondence, Business Correspondence, Business and Legal Papers, Miscellaneous and Martha Woodward. Subgroup A.H. Woodward is the most extensive and diverse of the subgroups due to a wide range of interests and involvement. There are six series: Diaries, Personal Correspondence, Business Correspondence, Business and Legal Papers, and Miscellaneous. Subgroup J.H. Woodward II is the smallest of the five subgroups. Three series exist here, Correspondence, Business and Legal papers and Miscellaneous. Subgroup Photographs includes family pictures, as well as business-related promotional pieces. These photographs cover the lifespan of J.H. Woodward I to J.H. Woodward II. Includes hunting photographs from A.H. Woodward and different stages of the development of Woodward Iron Company.

Divided into outgoing and incoming correspondence. Outgoing correspondence is chronologically arranged. Incoming correspondence is arranged alphabetically according to person or company, then chronologically. It is important to note that because the Woodwards were involved in a family business, their correspondence will reflect both business and private concerns. Thus, a personal letter may briefly discuss business and a business letter may contain family and personal information as well. Outgoing personal correspondence consists of letters from S.H. Woodward to family and friends, mainly family. Incoming personal correspondence, includes letters to S. H. Woodward from family and friends. Again, this correspondence is mostly family.

MARTHA WOODWARD 1894-1923 0.83 Linear feetScope and Contents note

Includes correspondence, business, personal, and general. Business correspondence relates to personal finances and J. H. Woodward Estate. Personal correspondence is mostly from lawyer and friend James Giles and daughter Bertha W. Underwood. Also included are cancelled checks and checking stubs from the Orlando Savings and Trust Company. Materials relate to personal financial issues and the estate of her husband. There is also a copy of Benner's Prophecies, of which J.H. owned an earlier edition, and her mother's Bible.

Diaries: Two volumes, both from 1905. One is a pocket-sized, bound, dated notebook for recording given to him by his wife, while the other is more of a business notebook. Neither covers the entire year.

PERSONAL CORRESPONDENCE 1888-1950 2.0 Linear feetScope and Contents note

Divided into outgoing and incoming subseries. Outgoing correspondence is chronologically arranged. Incoming correspondence is arranged alphabetically according to person or company, then chronologically. It is important to note that because the Woodwards were involved in a family business, their correspondence will reflect both business and private concerns. Thus, a personal letter may briefly discuss business and a business letter may contain family and personal information as well. The subseries Outgoing Personal Correspondence is extensive, consisting of letters from A.H. Woodward to his parents, his wife Annie and their children. Personal correspondence often includes business associates, making personal correspondence and business correspondence often difficult to differentiate. The subseries Incoming Personal Correspondence includes correspondence primarily from family and friends. "J.C. Lyons" is probably a nickname for daughter Eugenia.

Outgoing

BUSINESS CORRESPONDENCE 1888-1950 5.04Scope and Contents note

Outgoing Business Correspondence is the third subseries. Correspondence includes affairs of Woodward Iron Co., as well as the Birmingham Baseball Association and railroading. Of particular interest are accidents at the Woodward plant and construction of the Woodward Mansion. The subseries Incoming Business Correspondence is comprised of correspondence from business associates. The largest groups of correspondence are from First National Bank of Birmingham, Title Guarantee Loan and Trust, Wheeling Steel Corp and Woodward Iron Co. Correspondence directed to Woodward Iron Co.'s Treasurer D. E. Wilson has been grouped together.

Miscellaneous is divided into three subseries, Publications, General Miscellany and Artifacts. Publications are various and sundry publications collected by A. H. Woodward. Topics span from Woodward family history to iron making to railroads. Included is R.H. Banister's (President of Woodward Iron Company under A.H.) Industrial Scrapbook. Alphabetically arranged. General miscellany includes maps and blueprints to patent ideas, photographs and newspaper clippings. The clippings relate to baseball, personal and business endeavors. This is the only place the marriages of A. H. Woodward's daughters are to be found. Correspondence to his daughters, wife and youngest son are included as well (chronological arrangement). No general arrangement. Artifacts include sporting memorabilia, gifts, personal items, such as combs, glasses and wallets.

wartime correspondence to A.H. Woodward. Of particular interest within this correspondence is J.H. Woodward II's abrupt marriage announcement to his parents. Incoming Personal Correspondence consists of materials mostly from family members. Outgoing Business Correspondence covers the years 1935-1950. Most of this correspondence is as attorney-in-fact for A.H. Woodward or as a secretary for Woodward Iron Company. Incoming Business correspondence deals mostly with environmental issues and concerns relating to Woodward Iron Company.

Scope and Contents note

Mostly business related, A. H. Woodward's Business and Legal Papers subseries are organized by company and personal papers. Companies are alphabetically arranged, ending with Woodward Iron Co. Following the Interstate Commerce Commission accident bulletins, the remainder of this subseries is personal papers. Annual reports, financial statements, stock information and often board meeting reviews are included among the companies' papers. Detailed information for Wheeling Steel Corporation is available from 1925-1950 and for Woodward Iron Company from 1912-1950. Arranged chronologically within each company. The personal grouping includes ledgers, checkbooks, cancelled checks and receipts. Income Tax information is included. Also present are papers concerning construction of the Woodward Mansion on 4101 Altamont Avenue as well as J. H. Woodward Estate information. All are chronologically arranged, save receipts.
